It's the eyes of a child that draws you into this painting. The solemn eyes lend an air of mystery, dignity, and innocence to the child's facial expression. One wonders, who is he? What is he thinking? What is his experience? The title See Me becomes an invitation to ponder these questions as well as a declaration that one is worthy of being seen.

Beads, clothespins, and computer keys. These were just some of the materials used to create several of the most exciting artworks at this year's The Armory Show. As one of the world's leading fairs, The Armory Show presents more than 200 exhibitors from 35 countries, offering a one-stop global art experience. This year the trade show is at the Javits Center in New York City until Sept. 7. Below are just a few of the must-see artworks from this year's edition.
